RCC training helps small business owners to work with ODOT

Business management training is available for small business owners interested in working with the Oregon Department of Transportation (ODOT).

Starting Oct. 27, the Rogue Community College Business Development Center will offer the ODOT Small Business Management Business Growth course. The training is geared for those who own highway-related construction, maintenance, or consulting businesses that are designated as an Emerging Small Business (ESB) or Disadvantaged Business Enterprise (DBE).

Learn how to work with ODOT and boost business profitability with this hands-on practical course, which provides individualized guidance on how to more effectively work “on,” not just “in” your business.

The nine-month training consists of one class and up to two hours of individual business counseling per month. Phone and Internet counseling will be available for businesses located out of the area. The training qualifies for Construction Contractors Board continuing education units (CEU) and is a non-credit course with no tests or grades.

Tuition is just $100 if paid prior to the first class. Additional persons from the same business may enroll for an additional $75 per person.

Roger Harding will lead the classroom and counseling sessions. Classes will be held at the RCC Business Development Center, 214 SW Fourth St., Grants Pass. Call the BDC at 956-7494 for further information.
