New RCC class based on Covey’s “7 Habits of Highly Effective People”

Guiding principles for personal growth are the focus of a new class to be offered by Rogue Community College.

Scheduled from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Fridays, April 17 through May 15, “7 Habits of Highly Effective People”© is based on Stephen Covey’s bestselling book and on the premise that delivering superior performance starts with understanding the full capabilities of individuals in an organization. The class aims to help people realize their full potential at work and in life, setting the groundwork for personal growth that can expand and engage others on the path to success.

The class will meet at the RCC-SOU Higher Education Center, Room 205, 101 S. Bartlett, Medford. Tuition is $399 and includes a $185 workbook. Janet Shalda is the instructor.

The FranklinCovey© course it is offered in conjunction with Southern Oregon University and the Oregon Employer Council. Enrollment is limited; register on-line at www.roguecc.edu/sbdc, at any RCC registration site, or call the SBDC at 956-7494 for pre-registration and further information.
