Self-paced courses for financial planners, insurance agents, and managers available at RCC’s SBDC

Rogue Community College’s Small Business Development Center provides courses that can be completed from home or office.

SBDC offerings include: Web-based courses to help meet Oregon requirements for continuing education for certified financial planners and insurance agent, as well as pre-licensing for Oregon insurance agents and securities and futures trading; textbook-based American Management Association courses in a number of business-related courses; and Education to Go courses on the Internet in over 300 business, nonprofit management and community topics.

Certified financial planning continuing education and insurance agent and securities and futures trader pre-licensing; Web-based courses are offered in partnership with 360 Training. To review these state-approved courses and register go to http://roguecc.360training.com.

Insurance agent continuing education needed for state license renewal through reasonably priced, Web-based courses. For complete course descriptions of over 50 courses and to register, go to http://roguecc.webce.com.

Supervisor training—American Management Association: These convenient textbook-based courses deliver the skills needed to succeed professionally. Ten weeks are allowed to complete each course, after which an AMA/RCC certificate of participation will be awarded. Continuing Education Units (CEUs) are available for many of these courses. Open enrollment; tuition per course is $150. AMA classes include performance coaching, communication and assertiveness training, and financial, legal and employment courses.
